1.2 Course aims and learning outcomes

The course is designed as an introduction to the concepts underlying modern approaches to the study of politics. The introduction of comparative politics, a field that involves cross-national analysis and area studies of domestic politics in different countries. The course is taught in units of political actors, political phenomena and specific theoretical problems. The theme-based composition of the course will familiarize the students with the main theoretical frameworks in contemporary Comparative Politics, i.e. the structuralist approach, the culturalist approach, the institutionalist approach and the agency-based approach.

Learning outcomes:

By the end of this course students should be able to:

- understand the basic methods in comparative politics;
- define the components of a political system and discuss the ways domestic and international environments can affect it
- apply major theories and concepts of comparative politics to current events and specific cases,
- critically interpret political events and political trends;
- assess structural, cultural and institutional factors determining political outcomes;
- understand the essence of institutional arrangements;
- compare political institutions, political culture and political participation across nations;
- have enhanced understanding of the political processes and political trends in different regions of the world
- make comparisons

1.3 Course requirements and grading plan

Course requirements

Students will be required to attend not less than 90% of classes and be prepared for class discussions. Reading of the assigned materials and active engagement in class discussions is compulsory.

Grading plan

- Class participation – 20%

Students are expected to attend all the lectures seminars and participate in class discussions; since the course is highly interactive, it is essential that students attend the seminars having read the materials for that day's class.

- In-class tests – 40%
Students will write three tests during the semester. Dates of test classes are defined by the instructor and communicated to the students at the first class of the respective course.
- In-class issue presentation – 40%.
Such a presentation (up to 15 minutes) is performed by each student at least once in the term. The presentation will be based on the week's additional readings and discussion topics. The presenter should supply a brief summary of the argument but offer a critical interpretation of the reading by drawing out the key ideas of the text, linking them with others already covered, and registering agreements and disagreements. The presenter should also attempt to consider how the given argument could be framed differently. A few critical questions should further be offered for the class to discuss collectively.

PART 3. FINAL REMARKS

- Plagiarism is considered as a severe violation and as an indication of incompetence in the course. Plagiarism is understood as making of one's text using compilation method for other people's publications, even connected with own phrases and sentences. Collective performance of individual tasks is also unacceptable. Proved plagiarism an F-mark is given regardless of the fulfillment of all other requirements.
- Assignments are to be handed in on the due date. Late submissions will translate into the lowering of the grade by 1/3 of a grade for each day of delay.
- Students are asked to keep a copy of all work submitted for evaluation.
