- Type of course: Compulsory
- Level of course: BA
- Year of study: 2nd.
- Number of ECTS credits allocated: 5.
- Academic hours: 210 hours (64 for in-class activities, 104 for home assignments and 42 for control and exam).
- Lectures: 32 hours.
- Seminars: 32 hours.
- Name of lecturer:
Dr. Andrei V. Zagorski
Professor, Department of International Relations and Foreign Policy of Russia
E-mail:zagorskiandrei@gmail.com

1.2. Course aims and learning outcomes

The main objective of the course is to provide students with a comprehensive knowledge of the history of the Cold war, the policies of the major states, main developments and particular issues on the international agenda. The course also aims at improving the students' ability to use historical methods and primary sources of the study of history.

Learning outcomes:

By the end of the course, students should have:

- acquired a profound knowledge of the state-of-the-art research of the Cold War history;
- familiarized themselves with the main structural characteristics of the international relations during the Cold War and the main concepts referred to in contemporary international debates;
- improved their experience of working with primary sources;
- developed the ability to understand and order facts against the background of more general international developments
- improved their skills of presenting the findings of their research orally and in written;
- have established a solid baseline related to the global and regional problems and developments to be followed-up in the subsequent course on Contemporary international relations.

1.3 Course requirements and grading plan

Course requirements:

Students are required to attend no less than 90% of classes (both lectures and seminars) and be well prepared for class discussions. Conscientious reading of assigned materials is compulsory. Expanding reading beyond the assigned materials is most welcome.

During the semester, students are required to pass through three in-class rating tests based on lectures and assigned reading materials and cover subjects already discussed in lectures and seminars. Students are required to respond to 20 multiple choice questions. The outcomes of the tests are discussed at the beginning of the following seminar.

Subjects of lectures and seminars do not coincide. Subjects of a more general nature are covered in lectures, more specific subjects are discussed in the seminars. For details see the thematic schedule of classes and elaborate seminars outlines.

During the semester, students are required to write and submit a course thesis (paper) that is evaluated separately.

The course ends with a written exam that is evaluated separately.

Grading Plan:

In-class test:

- every question has at least one correct and at least one wrong response option
- selecting all correct and no wrong responses 5 points
- selecting not all correct and no wrong response option between 1 and 4 points
- selecting one or more wrong response options 0 points

Activity in the seminar multiplier:

- very active and good command of material x 1.3
- active and good command of material x 1.2
- low activity but good command of material x 1.1
- active but bad command of material x 1.0
- passive and bad command of material x 1.0

The final semester grade is calculated as the result of multiplication of the average score from the three in-class tests by the multiplier factor.

Written exam is graded separately at the end of the course. Responding to two questions, students are expected to demonstrate good command of the factual baseline, summarize, in a concise form, the essence of the issue (problem), identify relevant stakeholders, their perspectives and policies, and the authors' perspective on the issue based on the assigned reading materials.

Students are admitted to the exam provided they have submitted course theses (papers) and the thesis has been accepted by the supervisor.

The course thesis, between 4,000 and 8,000 words in length, is graded separately and should be submitted by 15th of May. It should meet the requirements established by the MGIMO-University (check the Course Papers Preparation Guidelines of the MGIMO School of Governance and International Relations).
